To the point: Mumbai has a strong Art Deco heritage that few know about. But a team of architects and urban planners are documenting this rich knowledge with major and little known facts about Art Deco buildings in the city on their website and Instagram account.

Did you know that Mumbai is second to only Miami in the USA when it comes to the number of Art Deco buildings it possesses? Art Deco Mumbai is an initiative, comprising a team of architects and urban planners, that began putting the spotlight this massive legacy through posts on its Instagram page with gorgeous vignettes of buildings – some well-known like Regal cinema and other lesser known (but equally stunning) ones like the Fairland building near Oval Maidan. “The idea was to create awareness of the incredible architecture that we have amongst the people who reside in this city,” says founder Atul Kumar.

If their Instagram posts have your interest piqued, they also have a full-fledged website where you can deep dive into Mumbai’s Art Deco history. Browse through their visual gallery, which is conveniently catalogued according to location. We love that they even have a section depicting typical elements and features of Art Deco buildings – did you know that even name plates were distinctive? You can also read up on the history of the Art Deco movement, both internationally and in Mumbai, alongside conservation efforts that are being initiated around the world.
